Figures A1.1 and A1.2 show the perceptions held by Fitz-Stirling actors on the effects of collaborative relationships on the performance of on-ground activities. Data were gathered through semi-structured interviews and a survey conducted online using the software Checkbox. Survey data were collected between October 2011 and July 2012. A copy of the questions can be provided upon request.

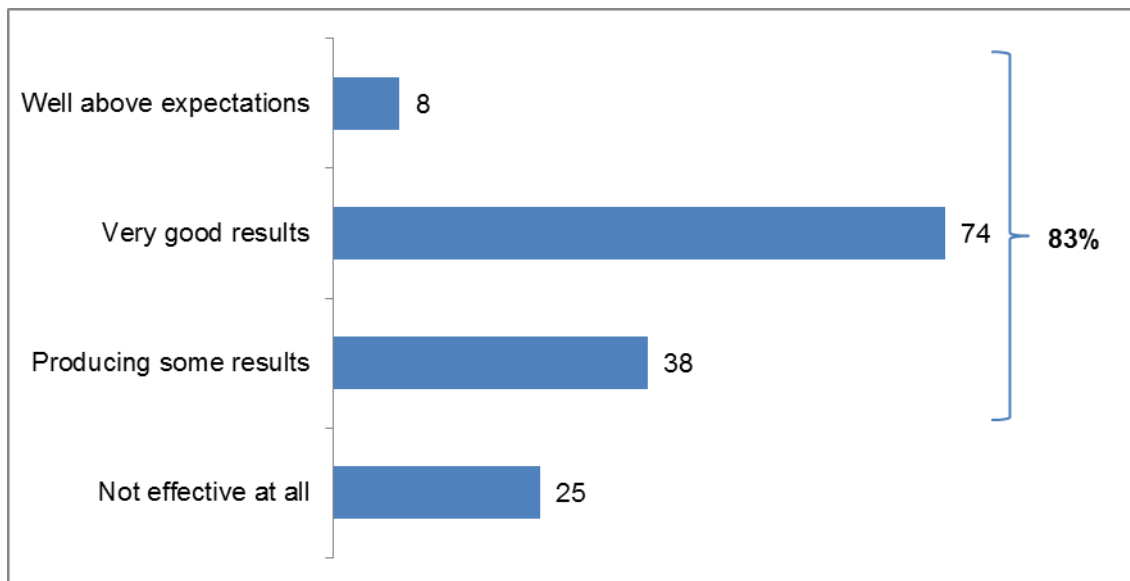

Figure A1.1 Number of collaborations perceived as delivering some, very good, or results above expectations to the particular activity performed at a particular location n = 145.

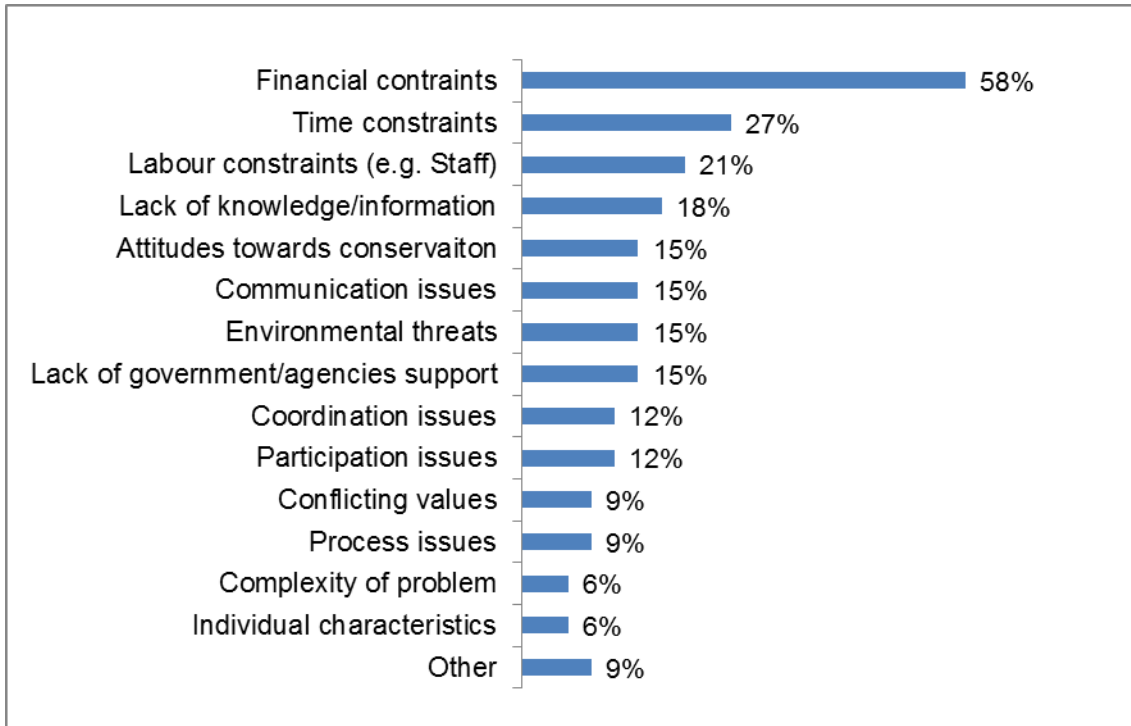

Figure A1.2. Perceived barriers to conservation action implementation including communication and coordination issues. Proportion of respondents who mentioned each barrier - unprompted (n=33).
